Doctoral students, young researchers and policy makers are invited to join a series of workshops aimed to develop competences in the science-for-policy field. Inspired by the European Competence Framework for Innovative Policymaking, an international team of partners from Portugal, Belgium, Lithuania, Poland, Hungary, and France have developed case-based training sessions which will be organised during April-May 2025.

The sessions will be organised in a series of three sequential sessions in an online way (synchronous and asynchronous) to allow participation in international teams of doctoral students, young researchers, policy makers and civil society representatives.

Participants will be granted certificates upon successfully completing the course. The learning platform will be Moodle and Teams.

Registration is open through April 30, 2025.
